Change Management Learning Resource

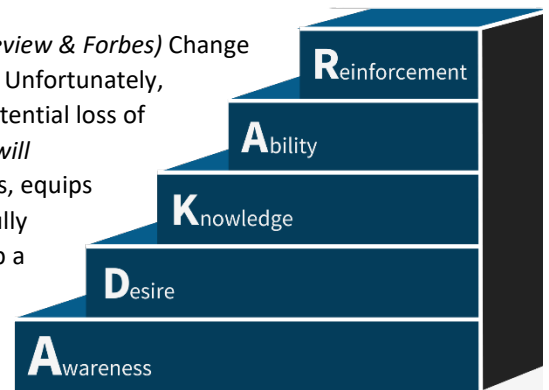

Updated August 2024

Before you begin working through this learning resource, reach out to Organizational Development to receive a copy of Jeffery M. Hiatt's "Employee's Survival Guide to Change" workbook (via Inter-D) and a digital copy of an ADKAR Change Evaluation Worksheet to more easily apply the concepts you'll learn about in this resource to real-world experiences.

Why Should I Care About Change Management?

Did you know the failure rate of change initiatives is 70 percent? (Harvard Business Review & Forbes) Change is a necessary force in all organizations, it's what makes a business grow and succeed. Unfortunately, change often comes with some degree of uncertainty, push-back, confusion, and a potential loss of employees (hence the large failure rate!). How can we manage change in a way that will succeed? You guessed it: Change Management. Change management is what prepares, equips and supports the individuals who make up an organization. It allows folks to successfully change how they do their jobs, understand why those changes are necessary, develop a commitment to the shift and effectively work through it.

The Change Management model that the City of Madison is utilizing is the ADKAR Model. ADKAR was developed in 2003 by Prosci, Inc and its founder, Jeff Hiatt.

Through 25+ years of research in more than 700 organizations, ADKAR has proven to be a successful framework for the people side of change. ADKAR is action oriented, accessible and built on evidence-based practices.

Introduction to the ADKAR Model:

The word "ADKAR" is an acronym for the five building blocks of change which helps an individual understand and successfully adopt the change. The letters stand for the following:

- A – Awareness of the need for change.
- D – Desire to participate and support the change.
- K – Knowledge on how to change.
- A – Ability to implement desired skills & behaviors.
- R – Reinforcement to sustain the change.

Additional ADKAR Resources:
