Yellow means that name was leading in a particular round. Blue means a name was in second place during a particular round. Purple means the name was in third place during that round.

Anne Pathaway is the winner! It was close, too. The name did not take the lead until Round 9 and only won by 66 votes!

Why did Anne Pathaway win? Since no candidate received a majority of the votes, Anne Pathaway had the most votes during the final round.

What is an exhausted vote? It's easier to explain this with an example. Look at Round 1. 61 voters picked Cappy Trails as their first choice. This was the lowest vote-getter. No candidate received a majority of support, so the lowest vote getter is eliminated - tough break, Cappy Trails, but you're eliminated. Now, everyone that voted for Cappy Trails instead gets to have their vote counted for their second-choice candidate during Round 2. However, 9 voters only picked Cappy Trails. These 9 votes were "exhausted" in Round 2 because they could not be moved to any other active candidate. So "exhausted votes" are the number of votes in a round that cannot be applied to any of the active candidates.

Mike Snowplowski is the winner! This was interesting. It did not take the lead until Round 8, but wound up having the largest margin of victory in the whole election.

Why did Mike Snowplowski win? Since no candidate received a majority of the votes, Mike Snowplowski had the most votes during the final

Princess Sleigha is the winner! Hardly any drama with this one. Snow Pun Intended kept it close, but Princess Sleigha led from start to finish.

Why did Princess Sleigha win? Since no candidate received a majority of the votes, Princess Sleigha had the most votes during the final round.

What is an exhausted vote? It's easier to explain this with an example. Look at Round 1. 74 voters picked Captain Freeze-Your-Pants as their first choice. This was the lowest vote-getter. Sno'diggity is the winner! This one was decided by just four votes! Even though Sno'diggity led every single round, it was a photo finish at the end. When Scrapes of Wrath was eliminated, a lot of the support went to Plowmetheus - but just enough also went to Sno'diggity.

Why did Sno'diggity win? Since no candidate received a majority of the votes, Sno'diggity had the most votes during the final round.

What is an exhausted vote? It's easier to explain this with an example. Look at Round 1. 30 voters picked Douglas Snowbanks as their first choice. This was the lowest vote-getter. Yellow means that name was leading in the round. Blue means a name was in second place during the round. Purple means the name was in third place during the round.

Snowceratops is the winner! A lot of drama and activity with this one. Hammie Mae had the most number of name submissions during the nomination phase, but finished last. Three different names shared time in third place. And the eventual winner didn't take the lead until Round 9!

Why did Snowceratops win? Since no candidate received a majority of the votes, Snowceratops had the most votes during the final round.

What is an exhausted vote? It's easier to explain this with an example. Look at Round 1. 16 voters picked Yukon Maykmi-Hawtusno as their first choice (Did you notice that this one is actually a reference a Chappell Roan song? It's hard to see, but very clever). This was the lowest vote-getter. No candidate received a majority of support, so the lowest vote getter is eliminated - tough break, Yukon, but you're eliminated.
